

800-Acre Unit At Port Mayaca Farms

necessary if it was a town-plot proposition or a grove development alone or a trucking venture alone. Fertilizer used for the truck crops serves the trees also.

As groves do not bring revenue for three, four or five years, the accumulated overhead charges would be considerable, but that cost is absorbed in the profit from the trucking operations, profit in the trucking operations being made assured by the fact that the grove is furnishing the land. Cultivation of the grove is furnished by the cultivation of the truck crops.

Whether or not the use of space between rows of fruit trees is practicable elsewhere is not pertinent to the Port Mayaca development, because if in some other section of the country one crop of vegetables is grown in a year, two crops are grown here, each crop as profitable as the one crop a year elsewhere because of the higher prices at the season our vegetables are sold.

The installation and maintenance cost of the Port Mayaca water control system is split three ways—for the grove and the two vegetable crops, a division of costs not possible in any section where grove and vegetables are separated.

The term "water control" is coming to be used generally in this region to describe the result that is sought; not any more is there demand for drainage, for that is not enough, facilities for irrigation often saving or producing more money than drainage can effect.

Whether the Port Mayaca system, in theory and practice, is practicable for adequate drainage was tested during the 1928 hurricane which brought a flood as well as bringing a wind-damage; the dikes and ditches at Port Mayaca withstood in September 1928 a 12-inch rainfall and the consequent flood condition.

As for source of water for irrigation, the Port Mayaca development has on one side the St. Lucie canal, largest canal in Everglades drainage district, and on the other side Lake Okeechobee, the second largest freshwater lake in the United States. That "says a mouthful." The quality of Lake Okeechobee water is attested by the Florida State Board of Health. In the use of the methods employed in Texas and at Sanford and adapted those practices to local conditions. Although pumps are used on the present 800-acre development and will be used on the next unit, the slightly inclined character of the land permits a gravity system for the distribution of water when the water has been brought to a central point.

It is these conditions and the experience of the past two years that brought the decision to proceed with the development of the second 800-acre unit.

The first 800-acre unit was laid out for use by the company as one enterprise under one management; the plan of the second unit provides for individual and separate operation of each 20-acre tract, the original plan being modified slightly to provide for such different water levels as each 20-acre tract farmer's grove or truck crop conditions require without respect to his neighbor's operations.

P. A. Hoenschel, the manager of the Port Mayaca property, is a practical farmer with experience in fruits and vegetables in Virginia and South Florida. When he took over the direction of the property two years ago he remarked that if he "couldn't" devise a method of handling one 20-acre tract he couldn't expect to handle a hundred 20-acre tracts successfully," but if he could devise a lay-out for handling one 20-acre tract successfully, that would indicate that a thousand such tracts could be used successfully by that number of individual owners.

Gus Roell is the assistant manager, in charge of the commissary and the construction work and the labor crews.

Mr. Hoenschel and Mr. Roell have built residence houses on the highway fronting the lake, in that section of the development marked "Residential lots" on the accompanying map. A third dwelling, the first that was built in that locality, is used as a temporary inn, operated for the convenience of single employees. All of the houses are of the English style which style is to be maintained throughout. The residential lots fronting on the lake and extending back to the canal on the east contain three acres.

J. S. Twyman, who rented last season is in charge of all farming operations for the company.

An 8-inch water line has been laid to serve the dwelling houses in that section. A filling station in the best modern filling station style is to be erected at the corner of the highway and the St. Lucie canal bank road. Other features of the development are shown on the map.

U.S. OFFICIAL TELLS HOW LAW OPERATES

Enforcement in Hands of Attaches Who Travel As Occasion Demands

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23, 1929. Mr. Howard Sharp, Editor, The Everglades News, Canal Point, Fla.

Dear Sir: Our Mr. H. A. Spilman, in immediate charge of the enforcement of the Produce Agency Act, has handed your letter to him—dated August 19 as it touches upon matters connected with the work of other persons in this division.

In accordance with your request I am enclosing herewith "Service and Regulatory Announcement No. 107." It contains a copy of the act and regulations issued thereunder, and also a short statement "Analysis of the Produce Agency Act."

There is no legal requirement that we investigate all sales of produce at the delivery point, when complaints are made under the Produce Agency Act in connection with the sale of produce. We must obtain the information concerning the disposition of the produce as best we can. It is only fair to the receiving trade, however, to state that in most cases we have been given access to records of the receiving trade, and have answered without any apparent attempt to mislead us.

We do not maintain an official commercial inspection service in all the principal markets, which is provided for under a clause in the act. It is the duty of the receiving trade to make appropriations for this department, which clause has come to be known as the "Produce Agency Law." Under this language the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to investigate the quality and condition of perishable farm products when received in important central markets or places which can be conveniently reached therefrom. These inspections are made only on request and for the payment of a fee which is uniformly $1.00 per carload, any exceptions being covered by special arrangement.

The certificate resulting from these inspections is prima-facie evidence in United States Courts. Shippers from your territory can have their goods inspected on arrival in almost any of the larger markets if for any reason they need a "disinterested statement" as to the grade or condition of the goods.

All the men engaged in the enforcement of the Produce Agency Act have their headquarters in this city and travel throughout the country as occasion demands. We have not thought it good policy to station a regulatory officer permanently in any one locality as it is not a good plan to have the trade become too familiar with an individual in this position.

We have "cooperative agreements with Commissioner L. N. Moore, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., dated August 1, 1929, which provides for the exchange of information and cooperation in the enforcement of the Produce Agency Act and the Plant Quarantine Act.

Very truly yours,
W. A. STEWART & CO., INC.
V. A. Stewart, President.

Thinks Market Investigator "Done Noble" in Report On Bean Deal

New York, Aug. 27, 1929. Editor The Everglades News, Canal Point, Fla.

Dear Sir: I have your favor of the 18th and also copy of the News dated August 23. Thanks for your kind invitation in your letter to write our side of the case for publication. We can dispose of this matter at exceedingly short notice.

You practically answered the other side of the case when you printed the report of the investigator from Washington who handled this matter under the Produce Agency Act. The government investigator says that we are in the right with the exception that you would have to prove that our Mr. Doughty did actually make "Teller & Werthen a guaranteed advance" and you can't prove that. Then quoting from your own paper Mr. H. A. Spilman, marketing-specialist at Washington goes on to say it would still be doubtful whether you could enforce payment even if you could prove that Mr. Doughty agreed on behalf of V. A. Stewart & Company, Inc. to make a payment to Teller & Werthen.

Doesn't that clear V. A. Stewart & Company absolutely and completely?

The article you print is inane and greatly strained. You tried very hard to make a case for your three constant readers and then you print the report of the investigator for the government, which report is based on information taken from our books.

We regret very much that Teller and the Werthen boys who wanted share cropping did not make any money on their beans but at the same time we feel pretty good over the result of the investigation.

Very truly yours,
W. A. STEWART & CO., INC.

HERE IS THE LAW ON PERISHABLES

Federal law which became effective July 1, 1927. It is of particular interest to growers, shippers, commission merchants, brokers and distributors.

What is the chief purpose of this law?—To protect growers and shippers against fraud and to protect consumers from receiving inferior produce.

Whose business is affected by this law?—Commission merchants and any others who receive perishable farm products in interstate commerce for or on behalf of another.

To what produce does this law relate?—Fruits, vegetables, melons, dairy and poultry products, or any other perishable farm product.

What transactions by dealers are not covered by this law?—Purchases of produce for personal consumption; consignments not in interstate commerce; strictly brokerage transactions; joint accounts; cooperative associations except on produce handled for members; disposal of rejected produce by railroads, except as to accounting; non-perishable farm products, such as grains, cotton, livestock, etc.

What acts are prohibited?—Dumping or destroying of produce, received in interstate commerce for or on behalf of another, without good and sufficient cause; making any false statement to the shipper, knowingly and with intent to defraud, concerning the handling, condition, quantity, quality, sale or disposition of the produce; failure, knowingly and with intent to defraud, to account truly and correctly for the produce.

What is the penalty for violation of this Act?—A fine of not less than $100 and not more than $3,000, or imprisonment for a period of not exceeding one year, or both.

How can shippers secure the benefits of this Act?—If they have reason to believe that they have been defrauded in the handling of their consignments they may file a complaint with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. The complaint must set forth all facts concerning the transaction and must be accompanied by all available correspondence and other papers relating to the shipment. A blank form submitting a complaint as well as further information regarding this law, may be obtained by applying to the above address.

O.E.S. CHAPTER FOR EVERGLADES SOUGHT

Grand Chapter Officer Gives Information To Meeting Saturday Evening

Election of officers for an Everglades chapter, Order of Eastern Star, will be held Monday night in the hall above the Rexall drug store in Pahokee.

After the election, application will be made to the Grand Chapter for a dispensation to work under until a chapter is granted.

Active in securing a chapter of O. E. S. has been evidenced for some time past and last week Mrs. W. A. Adams secured names of eligible persons on a dispensation from the Grand Chapter.

At a meeting in the lodge rooms Saturday evening interested members and non-members discussed plans and they were assisted by the discussion by Associate Grand Marshal Lillian Kilpatrick and Mrs. Faircloth of Marianna and Mrs. Sarah Harris, past worthy matron of Quincy. The ladies outlined the requirements for securing a local chapter.

The meeting Saturday evening was presided over by George McFarly, W. M. of Everglades Lodge No. 211, F. & M. and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the business meeting.

and remembrance. And we observe Armistice Day in honor of those who lost their lives in the first world war. The hurried pace of the world war came caused so much loss of life and of property as well in the Everglades around Lake Okeechobee that there surely is abundant cause for observance.

Even if the first raw wounds of healing and life is carried on as before, the memory of departed loved ones and there is still something satisfying in remembering them.

Edgar E. Guest expresses this so feelingly in one of his homely couplets.

There is in grief a sweetness past compare,
A lively beauty pleasure never finds.

When grief strikes the blow is hard to bear;
We drap the door<sup>2</sup> and draw the window shades,
So deep the hurt, so cruel, is the pain.

I can truthfully say that the happiest days of my life have been lived on Lake Okeechobee. This was just the beginning of the story I have tried to write. The romance and the glory is in the present and the wonderful future of our great Everglades country.

Everglades Pioneer Compares Anniversary To War Remembrances

By John Newhouse.

The Everglades News asked some time ago if the anniversary of the hurricane of Sept. 16, 1928, and the death and destruction it brought, should be observed? I could say yes.

We observe Memorial Day, and lower the flag in deference to dear ones departed, and place flowers on their graves as a token of love

We loved so much.
 We have such sweet remembrances right there.
 We find our lips are richer than they were.
 We cannot say just why this should be so.
 We who have suffered tell you
 now in tears
 that as the dreary lonely months
 shall go
 Surely the pain of grieving disappears
 a time you'll find the anguish of despair
 Is freighted with a sweetness past compare.

1912, going down on the X-10-8, one of Bacon's run-boats. After the big flood the water stood five feet high at the west side of the lake, and that summer a lot of livestock perished and there was much damage to property but there were no lives lost. The water stood at a higher level that year than ever before or since, I understand. Ralph Warriner, one of the runboat men, told me that the only landmark visible to the boatmen was the Big Cypress near where Moore Haven was founded later. I spent four months on the boat, returning to the lake December 8.
